Un prix de plus en plus prestigieux

Le prix Peter Mackler a été créé à la mémoire de l'ancien rédacteur en chef de l'AFP pour l'Amérique du nord, brusquement décédé en 2008.

En plus de son infatigable passion pour l'information, Peter Mackler avait fondé le Global Media Forum, une organisation à but non lucratif pour enseigner le journalisme à travers le monde et initier les enfants aux grands principes de la profession.

Early one morning this summer Zaina Erhaim was woken by the whistling sound of a barrel bomb falling from a regime helicopter. She could tell that the bomb, packed with explosives and steel shrapnel, was going to land close to her apartment in rebel-held eastern Aleppo. Her husband, Mahmoud, told her not to be scared. He put his hands over her ears and tried to shield her body with his own. Seconds later there was a deafening explosion. The whole building shook. The doors and windows blew inwards. Erhaim remembers hearing screams outside and saw a nearby building burning. It was an improvised school and nursery.

Zaina Erhaim - Syrian female journalist wins Peter Mackler Award

Zaina Erhaim, the inspiring female journalist from the war ravaged and much destroyed Syria has won the prestigious Peter Mackler Award for Courageous and Ethical Journalism 2015. The 30-year old Zaina is a one-woman army of journalists, who changed the journalistic scene in Syria by training more than 100 citizen journalists in the print and the electronic media. Zaina has empowered women as about one third of the trained journalists are females. Many of her students have made forays into international media outlets and there is flow of information to the outside world in spite of the Syrian dictator Bashar Al Assad's ways to scuttle the media.

Survival in Syria: Children still going to school, people still falling in love

(CNN) Shelled-out apartment blocks, AK-47s and black flags, tanks and Russian jets: the images we have of Syria, of death and destruction, omit any idea of life.

But life goes on.

"People are still trying to survive," said journalist Zaina Erhaim. "They are still getting in love, they're still getting their children to schools -- although now the schools are in basements, although the field hospitals are in basements."
